Upside and downside capture versus the Russell 1000 Value Index since PM change (8/4/14-04/30/24)

Upside/downside capture is a measure of performance relative to a benchmark in periods of rising and falling markets. Upside capture is the percentage of the benchmark’s gains captured during periods when the benchmark was rising. Downside capture is the percentage of the benchmark’s losses captured during periods when the benchmark was falling. An upside or downside capture of 100% means performance was equal to that of the benchmark. A capture rate above 100% means the gains (i.e., upside capture) or losses (i.e., downside capture) were greater than that of the benchmark. A capture rate below 100% means the gains (i.e., upside capture) or losses (i.e., downside capture) were smaller than that of the benchmark. High dividend yield funds represented by the MSCI USA High Dividend Yield Index. Deep value funds represented by the Manager Benchmark Aggregate US Deep Value Index.

A large cap value strategy built for diverse markets

The fund seeks high quality companies with histories of paying and growing their dividend at attractive valuations. With this strategy, the fund has outperformed 52% of its peers since PM inception in August 2014.

New Year, Same Questions for U.S. Stocks

While the economy and stock market are not always linked, the strong run of economic data has led to renewed optimism for the US economy in 2024 which has translated into strong stock returns. While our team believes that the US economy can continue to be resilient and grow, we also see a narrow path for sustained growth at the current pace. In our view, the key measure to consider is “productivity”. If new technologies, such as generative AI, can help increase productivity at both the personnel and business level, this may help the US economy maintain its growth prospects barring other factors. However, if productivity growth expectations are not met or AI adoption proves volatile, we think the economy could struggle to maintain its strong growth. This helps drive conviction in our view that we continue to be “late-cycle” in the U.S. Additionally, many indicators remain indicative of a “late-cycle” economy such as: unemployment remaining generationally low and set to rise over time, savings rates among consumers continuing to be near all-time lows, and the yield curve¹ continuing to be inverted. We continue to believe this is an environment best suited for “quality” companies, i.e. those who demonstrate consistent earnings, have strong balance sheets, and have savvy management teams among other characteristics. These companies should be well positioned to manage through the economic cycle, especially compared to companies with financially difficult positions, such as levered balance sheets. In addition to seeking out quality companies, we feel valuation discipline is key given higher than average forward P/E ratios for equity markets. Lastly, while the election will get more airtime as the campaigns heat up, our team prefers to focus on more secular themes which may offer more attractive investment opportunities, such as reshoring and AI/digitalization.

The fund has outperformed the market and its peers with less volatility

Source: Morningstar, January 2000 – April 2024. Fund data is based on Institutional shares. Performance reflects a hypothetical investment of $10,000. Volatility is measured by annualized standard deviation. Capture ratios are based on monthly returns. Capture ratios measure a fund's performance vs an index. An upside capture ratio above 100 indicates that a fund gained more than the index when the index generated positive returns. A downside capture ratio below 100 indicates that a fund has lost less than the index when the index generated negative returns.

Exchange-traded funds and open-ended mutual funds are considered a single population for comparative purposes. It is calculated based on a Morningstar Risk-Adjusted Return measure that accounts for variation in a managed product's monthly excess performance, placing more emphasis on downward variations and rewarding consistent performance. The top 10% of products in each product category receive 5 stars, the next 22.5% receive 4 stars, the next 35% receive 3 stars, the next 22.5% receive 2 stars, and the bottom 10% receive 1 star. The Overall Morningstar Rating for a managed product is derived from a weighted average of the performance figures associated with its 3-, 5-, and 10-year (if applicable) Morningstar Rating metrics. The weights are: 100% 3-year rating for 36-59 months of total returns, 60% 5-year rating/40% 3-year rating for 60-119 months of total returns, and 50% 10-year rating/30% 5-year rating/20% 3-year rating for 120 or more months of total returns. While the 10-year overall star rating formula seems to give the most weight to the 10-year period, the most recent 3-year period actually has the greatest impact because it is included in all three rating periods. BlackRock Equity Dividend Fund received a Morningstar Rating of 3 stars for the 3-year period, 4 stars for the 5-year period and 4 stars for the 10-year period, rated against 1,109, 1,049 & 818 Large Value Funds, respectively. Performance results represent past performance and are no guarantee of future results. Ratings are for Institutional share class. Other classes may have different performance characteristics.
