Upside and downside capture versus the Russell 1000 Value Index since PM change (8/4/14-01/31/24)

Upside/downside capture is a measure of performance relative to a benchmark in periods of rising and falling markets. Upside capture is the percentage of the benchmark's gains captured during periods when the benchmark was rising. Downside capture is the percentage of the benchmark's losses captured during periods when the benchmark was falling. An upside or downside capture of 100% means performance was equal to that of the benchmark. A capture rate above 100% means the gains (i.e., upside capture) or losses (i.e., downside capture) were greater than that of the benchmark. A capture rate below 100% means the gains (i.e., upside capture) or losses (i.e., downside capture) were smaller than that of the benchmark. High dividend yield funds represented by the MSCI USA High Dividend Yield Index. Deep value funds represented by the Manager Benchmark Aggregate US Deep Value Index.

A large cap value strategy built for diverse markets

The fund seeks high quality companies with histories of paying and growing their dividend at attractive valuations. With this strategy, the fund has outperformed 44% of its peers since PM inception in August 2014.

New Year, Same Questions for U.S. Stocks

As we forge ahead into the new year, a few key themes remain top of mind: navigating a late cycle economy, increased appetite for quality, and widening market breadth. Despite inflation falling and strong economic data we saw in the past year, we expect a slowdown in 2024 leading to challenging economic conditions and a possible recession. While the odds of a widespread recession have certainly diminished relative to 2023, risks remain and it's imperative to keep an eye on the precautionary signals. Some late cycle risks in our view include low unemployment (3.7%)¹, negative monetary supply growth, an inverted yield curve, and dwindling consumer savings. With these risks top of mind, we retain our focus on quality equities to provide added resilience in our portfolios. As the Fed turns more dovish, we see quality stocks in a strong relative position as rate hikes come to a possible end. Quality fared well in 2023 as evidenced by the "magnificent seven"², many of which exhibit quality characteristics such as healthy balance sheets and strong free cash flow. As these mega-cap market leaders have grown expensive and valuations have expanded, so has the market-capitalization-weighted index (S&P 500). We believe the equal-weighted S&P 500 will take back its lead in the year ahead, indicating more market breadth and greater potential for stock-level dispersion. After a year of elevated recession fears and heightened volatility, we see greater opportunity in the new year as we focus on quality equities with sustainable earnings growth despite a potential economic slowdown.

The fund has outperformed the market and its peers with less volatility

Source: Morningstar, January 2000 – January 2024. Fund data is based on Institutional shares. Performance reflects a hypothetical investment of $10,000. Volatility is measured by annualized standard deviation. Capture ratios are based on monthly returns. Capture ratios measure a fund's performance vs an index. An upside capture ratio above 100 indicates that a fund gained more than the index when the index generated positive returns. A downside capture ratio below 100 indicates that a fund has lost less than the index when the index generated negative returns.

Exchange-traded funds and open-ended mutual funds are considered a single population for comparative purposes. It is calculated based on a Morningstar Risk-Adjusted Return measure that accounts for variation in a managed product's monthly excess performance, placing more emphasis on downward variations and rewarding consistent performance. The top 10% of products in each product category receive 5 stars, the next 22.5% receive 4 stars, the next 35% receive 3 stars, the next 22.5% receive 2 stars, and the bottom 10% receive 1 star. The Overall Morningstar Rating for a managed product is derived from a weighted average of the performance figures associated with its 3-, 5-, and 10-year (if applicable) Morningstar Rating metrics. The weights are: 100% 3-year rating for 36-59 months of total returns, 60% 5-year rating/40% 3-year rating for 60-119 months of total returns, and 50% 10-year rating/30% 5-year rating/20% 3-year rating for 120 or more months of total returns. While the 10-year overall star rating formula seems to give the most weight to the 10-year period, the most recent 3-year period actually has the greatest impact because it is included in all three rating periods. BlackRock Equity Dividend Fund received a Morningstar Rating of 3 stars for the 3-year period, 3 stars for the 5-year period and 4 stars for the 10-year period, rated against 1,129, 1,074 & 825 Large Value Funds, respectively. Performance results represent past performance and are no guarantee of future results. Ratings are for Institutional share class. Other classes may have different performance characteristics.
