Executive Summary

We believe BlackRock has a responsibility to monitor and provide feedback to companies, in our role as stewards of our clients’ investments. BlackRock Investment Stewardship (“BIS”) does this through engagement with management teams and/or board members on material business issues including environmental, social, and governance (“ESG”) matters and, for those clients who have given us authority, through voting proxies in the best long-term economic interests of our clients.

BlackRock has developed guidelines for the key markets in which it invests. The regional guidelines incorporate the legal framework of each region as well as the specific regional market practices. There may be slight variances due to differing market practices across regions.

Our policies for Asia ex Japan, Hong Kong and China are based on the relevant laws, regulation, market specific guidelines, and market practice for each market. These all have in common the principles of accountability, transparency, fairness, and responsibility. We set out below both general and market-specific expectations derived from our global principles and local codes and regulation.

Our approach to voting and corporate engagement is also informed by guidance on exercising ownership responsibilities issued by organizations such as the United Nations (the Principles of Responsible Investment) and the International Corporate Governance Network. We are actively involved in these and a number of other regional and global organizations and believe our principles are consistent with their guidance.

“Comply or explain” approach

In certain Asian markets, local corporate governance guidelines are underpinned by an approach that allows companies not to adopt recommended practices as long as a cogent explanation has been provide for the non-compliance with the particular practice. BlackRock expects companies that do not follow recommended practices in these markets to provide explicit justification of any deviation from market based practice, explaining how these serve the interests of the company’s shareholders.

Engagement

BlackRock looks to companies to provide timely, accurate and comprehensive reporting on all material governance and business matters including ESG issues. This allows shareholders to appropriately understand and assess how relevant risks and opportunities are being effectively identified and managed. Where company reporting and disclosure is inadequate or the approach taken is inconsistent with our view of what supports sustainable long-term value creation, we will engage with a company and/or use our vote to encourage a change in practice.

BlackRock views engagement as an important activity; engagement provides us with the opportunity to improve our understanding of the business and ESG risks and opportunities that are material to the companies in which our clients invest. As long-term investors on behalf of clients, we seek to have regular and continuing dialogue with executives and board directors to advance sound governance and sustainable business practices, as well as to understand the effectiveness of the company’s management and oversight of material issues. Engagement is an important mechanism for providing feedback on company practices and disclosures, particularly where we believe they could be enhanced. We primarily engage through direct dialogue but may use other tools such as written correspondence to share our perspectives. Engagement also informs our voting decisions.

We may also participate in joint intervention with other shareholders where concerns have been identified by a number of investors. Alternatively, for our active holdings, we may consider reducing our holding in a company which is unresponsive to shareholder concerns; or for index as well as active holdings, we may publicly oppose management who are unresponsive to these concerns.
Proxy voting approach

BlackRock is one of the world’s largest institutional investors, with extensive investment and engagement experience globally. The universe we cover in Asia ex Japan, Hong Kong and China includes but is not limited to Bangladesh, India, Indonesia, Kazakhstan, Malaysia, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Singapore, South Korea, Sri Lanka, Taiwan, Thailand and Vietnam. BlackRock aims to vote at 100% of the annual and extraordinary shareholder meetings where we have the voting authority to do so and where there are no opportunity costs associated with exercising a vote (such as share blocking constraints) that are expected to outweigh in the determination of the Investment Stewardship Group the benefit BlackRock clients would derive by voting on the proposal.

These guidelines will be used to assist BlackRock in assessing proposals presented at shareholder meetings. When assessing any proposal put to shareholders, BlackRock takes into account the unique circumstances of the relevant company and of the potential impact of such a proposal on the sustainable growth of the company. We aim to engage with management or members of the board, as appropriate, on contentious and high profile issues before determining how to vote. We also take into consideration market codes of governance and stewardship as applicable. At a minimum, BlackRock expects companies to meet the regulatory requirements of company law, listing rules of local exchanges, and any regional corporate governance codes.

These guidelines are divided into eight key themes as follows:

- Boards and directors
- Accounts, statutory reports, auditors, and audit-related issues
- Capital structure, mergers, asset sales, and other special transactions
- Strategy, purpose, and culture
- Compensation and benefits
- Environmental and social issues
- General corporate governance matters
- Shareholder proposals

Boards and directors

The performance of the board is critical to the economic success of the company and the protection of shareholders’ interests. As part of their responsibilities, board members owe fiduciary duties to shareholders in overseeing the strategic direction and operation of the company. For this reason, BlackRock focuses on directors in many of our engagements and sees the election of directors as one of our most important responsibilities in the proxy voting context.

Director elections

We support boards whose approach is consistent with creating sustainable long-term value. This includes the effective management of strategic, operational, and material ESG factors and the consideration of key stakeholder interests. Our primary focus is on the performance of the board of directors. The board should establish and maintain a framework of robust and effective governance mechanisms to support its oversight of the company’s strategic aims. We look to the board to articulate the effectiveness of these mechanisms in overseeing the management of business risks and opportunities and the fulfillment of the company’s purpose. Disclosure of material issues that affect the company’s long-term strategy and value creation, including material ESG factors, is essential for shareholders to be able to appropriately understand and assess how the board is effectively identifying, managing, and mitigating risks.
Where a company has not adequately disclosed and demonstrated these responsibilities, we will consider withholding our support for the re-election of directors whom we hold accountable. We assess director performance on a case-by-case basis and in light of each company’s particular circumstances, taking into consideration our assessment of their governance, sustainable business practices, and performance.

Composition of the board of directors

Regular director elections also give boards the opportunity to adjust their composition in an orderly way to reflect the evolution of the company’s strategy and the market environment. BlackRock believes it is beneficial for new directors to be brought onto the board periodically to refresh the group’s thinking and in a manner that supports both continuity and appropriate succession planning. We expect companies to keep under regular review the effectiveness of its board (including its size), and assess directors nominated for election or re-election in the context of the composition of the board as a whole. This assessment should consider a number of factors, including the potential need to address gaps in skills or experience, the diversity of the board, and the balance of independent and non-independent directors. We also consider the average tenure of the overall board, where we are seeking a balance between the knowledge and experience of longer-serving members and the fresh perspectives of newer members.

Assessment of independence

We expect there to be a sufficient number of independent directors, free from conflicts of interest or undue influence from connected parties, to ensure objectivity in the decision-making of the board and its ability to oversee management.

An independent director is a director who is not a member of management (a non-executive director) and who:

- Does not have, and does not represent a shareholder with, a substantial shareholding in the company
- Has not within the last five years been employed in an executive capacity by the company or another group company, and has not been appointed a director immediately after ceasing to hold any such employment
- Has not within the last three years been a principal or employee of a material professional adviser or a material consultant to the company or another group member
- Is not a material supplier or customer of the company or another group member or an officer of or otherwise associated directly or indirectly with a material supplier or customer
- Has no material contractual relationship with the company or another group member other than as a director of the company
- Is free from any interest and any business or other relationship which could, or could reasonably be perceived to, materially interfere with the director’s ability to act in the best interests of the company
- Is not an immediate family member of any of the aforementioned
- Is not connected through interlocking directorships with the company

Conflicts of interest

BlackRock believes that all independent directors should be free from material conflicts of interest. Non-executive directors, their immediate family or a related professional company, who or which have provided material professional services to a company at any time during the last three years, may be placed in a position where they may have to make decisions that may place their interests against those of the shareholders they represent. BlackRock may vote against the election / re-election of a director where an identified conflict of interest may pose a significant and unnecessary risk to shareholders. All potential conflicts of interest should be declared prior to appointment and at each board meeting in relation to any specific agenda item.
Separation of chairman and CEO position

We believe that independent leadership is important in the board room. There are two accepted structures for independent board leadership: 1) an independent chairman; or 2) a lead independent director. We generally consider the designation of a lead independent director as an acceptable alternative to an independent chair if the lead independent director has a term of at least one year and has powers to: 1) introduce items on board meeting agendas; 2) call meetings of the independent directors; and 3) preside at meetings of independent directors. Where a company does not have a lead independent director that meets these criteria, we generally support the separation of chairman and CEO and may vote against the election or re-election of a non-independent chairman.

Length of service

BlackRock believes that shareholders are best served when there is orderly renewal of the board. This should result in directors with accumulated experience while at the same time introduce fresh minds and experience to the board as well as provide adequate succession planning. An effective renewal process will ensure non-executive directors do not serve for such lengths of time that their independence may be impaired. BlackRock will consider voting against the re-election of directors who have been on the board for a significant period of time especially if there is no evidence of board renewal.

Board effectiveness

We believe independent directors should comprise at least one-third of the board for these directors to represent an effective voice; ideally, a board should consist of a majority of independent directors. To ensure that the board remains effective, regular reviews of how it makes decisions and the information it receives should be carried out and assessments made of gaps in skills or experience amongst the members. In identifying potential candidates, boards should take into consideration the diversity of experience, expertise, and perspectives of the current directors and how that might be augmented by incoming directors. Diversity also recognizes differences relating to gender, age, ethnicity, and cultural background. Our publicly available commentary explains our approach to engaging on board diversity.

We believe that directors are in the best position to assess the composition and optimal size of the board but we would be concerned if a board seemed too small to have an appropriate balance of directors or too large to be effective.

We expect the board to establish a robust process to evaluate the performance of the board as a whole and the contributions of each director. BlackRock believes that annual performance reviews of directors and the board contribute to a more efficiently functioning board.

Nomination procedure

The company should have a formal and transparent procedure for the appointment and re-appointment of directors. The board should adopt a procedure that can ensure a diverse range of candidates to be considered. Such procedure may involve the engagement of external professional search firms.

When nominating new directors to the board, there should be detailed information on the individual candidates in order for shareholders to assess the suitability of an individual nominee and the overall board composition. These disclosures should give a clear sense of how the collective experience and expertise of the board aligns with the company’s long-term strategy and business model. We also expect disclosures to demonstrate how diversity is accounted for within the proposed board composition, including demographic factors such as gender, ethnicity, and age; as well as professional characteristics, such as a director’s industry experience, specialist areas of expertise, and geographic location.

The procedure for the nomination of directors and evaluation of the board as described above should be disclosed in the corporate governance section in the annual report. We seek information to understand how the board composition reflects the company’s stated strategy, trends impacting the business, and succession expectations. Where this information is not provided, BlackRock may consider voting against re-election of members on the nomination committee.
Regular accountability

BlackRock believes that directors should stand for re-election on a regular basis, ideally annually. In our experience, annual re-elections allow shareholders to reaffirm their support for board members or hold them accountable for their decisions in a timely manner. When board members are not re-elected annually, we believe it is good practice for boards to have a rotation policy to ensure that, through a board cycle, all directors have had their appointment re-confirmed, with a proportion of directors being put forward for re-election at each annual general meeting.

Disclosure of director information

BlackRock expects the following information to be disclosed in the annual report and company website:

- Directors’ full name and age
- Date appointed to the board (in the case of re-elections)
- Brief biography detailing the director’s educational background, working experience, and any other board positions held
- Specific discussion of the skills and experience the director is expected to contribute to the board
- The company’s assessment of the director’s independence, including details of any current dealings with the company

Particularly when a director is seeking election / re-election, it is imperative the above information is provided to allow us to determine whether to support the appointment. Where this information is not forthcoming, BlackRock may consider voting against the election / re-election of that director.

External board mandates

As the role of a director is demanding, directors must be able to commit an appropriate amount of time to board and committee matters. It is important that every director has the capacity to meet all of his/her responsibilities - including when there are unforeseen events – and therefore, he/she should not take on an excessive number of roles that would impair his/her ability to fulfill his/her duties.

BlackRock expects companies to provide a clear explanation of the capacity to contribute in situations where a board candidate is (1) a director serving on more than six public company boards; (2) a chairman of another listed company, or (3) an executive officer at a public company and is serving on more than two other public company boards. When looking at the number of board mandates, BlackRock will consider if the board memberships are of listed companies in the same group and / or for similar sectors.

BlackRock may vote against the election / re-election of a director where there is a risk the director may be over-committed in respect of other responsibilities and / or commitments (taking into account outside employments and / or board mandates on private companies / investment trusts / foundations). In the case of an executive officer, we would vote against his / her election only at external boards.

BlackRock may vote against the election / re-election of an outside executive as the chairman of the board as we expect the chairman to have greater time availability than other non-executive board members. We expect the company to explain why it is necessary for an external executive to lead the board of directors.

Meeting attendance

Directors should ensure they attend all board and relevant committee meetings. BlackRock will consider voting against a director who fails to attend at least 75% of board and relevant committee meetings for the past term of being a director, unless compelling reasons for the absenteeism have been disclosed. However, BlackRock will disregard attendance in the first year following appointment as the director may have had commitments made prior to joining the board.
Committees

Appropriately structured board committees provide an efficient mechanism which allows the board to focus on key issues such as audit, board renewal, remuneration, risk, and any other issues deemed important. Board committees can also provide an important role dealing with conflicts of interests.

The audit committee should comprise only non-executive directors and a majority of independent directors, an independent chair and with at least one member having appropriate accounting or related financial background. Where the audit committee does not comprise a majority of independent directors and the chair is not independent, BlackRock will consider voting against the re-election of non-independent members of the audit committee. Further, where BlackRock believes a company has evidenced a failure of the audit committee relating to the preparation of financial statements, fraud, and general accountability to shareholders, we will consider voting against the re-election of members of the audit committee.

All committees should have written terms of reference which should, inter alia, clearly set out the committee’s roles and responsibilities, composition, structure, membership requirements, and the procedures for inviting non-committee members to attend meetings. All committee terms of reference should be available to investors on the company’s website. All committees should be given the power and resources to meet their obligations under the terms of reference. This will include the right of access to management and the ability to select service providers and advisors at a reasonable cost to the company.

The chairman of a committee should be independent and each committee should have a majority of independent directors. It is preferable for the chairman of the board not to chair board committees as this may lead to a concentration of power in a single director.

Risk oversight

Companies should have an established process for identifying, monitoring, and managing key risks. Independent directors should have ready access to relevant management information and outside advice, as appropriate, to ensure they can properly oversee risk management. We encourage companies to provide transparency around risk measurement, mitigation, and reporting to the board. We are particularly interested in understanding how risk oversight processes evolve in response to changes in corporate strategy and/or shifts in the business and related risk environment. Comprehensive disclosure provides investors with a sense of the company’s long-term operational risk management practices and, more broadly, the quality of the board’s oversight. In the absence of robust disclosures, we may reasonably conclude that companies are not adequately managing risk.

Accounts, statutory reports, auditors, and audit-related issues

BlackRock recognizes the critical importance of financial statements, which should provide a true and fair picture of a company’s financial condition. Accordingly, the assumptions made by management and reviewed by the auditor in preparing the financial statements should be reasonable and justified.

The accuracy of financial statements, inclusive of financial and non-financial information, is clearly of paramount importance to BlackRock. Investors’ views on financial materiality are developing to encompass a broader range of risks. Over time, we expect increased scrutiny of the assumptions underlying financial reports.

In this context, audit committees or equivalent play a vital role in a company’s financial reporting system, by providing independent oversight of the accounts, material financial and non-financial information, internal control frameworks and Enterprise Risk Management systems. BlackRock believes that effective audit and risk committee oversight strengthens the quality and reliability of a company’s financial statements and operations and provides an important level of reassurance to shareholders.
We hold the members of the audit committee or equivalent responsible for overseeing the management of the audit function. Audit committees or equivalent should have clearly articulated charters that set out the committee’s responsibilities and have a rotation plan in place that allows for a periodic refreshment of the committee memberships.

We take particular note of critical accounting matters, cases involving significant financial restatements or ad hoc notifications of material financial weakness. In this respect, audit committees should provide timely disclosure on the remediation of Key and Critical Audit Matters identified either by the external auditor or Internal Audit function.

The integrity of financial statements depends on the auditor being free of any impediments to being an effective check on management. To that end, we believe it is important that auditors are, and are seen to be, independent. Where the audit firm provides services to the company in addition to the audit, the fees earned should be disclosed and explained. Audit committees should have in place a procedure for assessing annually the independence of the auditor and the quality of the external audit process.

Comprehensive disclosure provides investors with a sense of the company’s long-term operational risk management practices and, more broadly, the quality of the board’s oversight. The audit committee or equivalent should periodically review the company’s risk assessment and risk management policies and significant risks and exposures identified by management, the internal auditors or the independent accountants, and management’s steps to address them. In the absence of robust disclosures, we may reasonably conclude that companies are not adequately managing risk.

Capital structure, mergers, asset sales, and other special transactions

The capital structure of a company is critical to shareholders as it impacts the value of their investment and the priority of their interest in the company relative to that of other equity or debt investors. Pre-emptive rights are a key protection for shareholders against the dilution of their interests.

Dual class shares

Effective voting rights are basic rights of share ownership and we believe strongly in one vote for one share as a guiding principle that supports effective corporate governance. Shareholders, as the residual claimants, have the strongest interest in protecting company value, and voting power should match economic exposure.

In principle, we disagree with the creation of a share class with equivalent economic exposure and preferential, differentiated voting rights as it violates the fundamental corporate governance principle of proportionality, and results in a concentration of power in the hands of a few shareholders, thus disenfranchising other shareholders and amplifying any potential conflicts of interest. However, we recognize that in certain markets, at least for a period of time, companies may have a valid argument for dual-class listings. We believe that such companies should review these share class structures on a regular basis or as company circumstances change. Additionally, they should receive shareholder approval of their capital structure on a periodic basis via a management proposal at the company’s shareholder meeting. The proposal should give unaffiliated shareholders the opportunity to affirm the current structure or establish mechanisms to end or phase out controlling structures at the appropriate time, while minimizing costs to shareholders.

As always, independent directors are expected to protect the interests of all shareholders and BlackRock will potentially vote against re-election of independent directors in companies with dual class share structures if valid concerns arise relating to the economic interests of unaffiliated shareholders being compromised.

Mergers, asset sales, related-party, and other special transactions

In assessing mergers, asset sales, or other special transactions, BlackRock’s primary consideration is the long-term economic interests of our clients as shareholders. Boards proposing a transaction need to clearly explain the economic and strategic rationale behind it. We will review a proposed transaction to determine the degree to which it enhances long-term shareholder value. We would prefer that proposed transactions have the unanimous support of the board and have been negotiated at arm’s length. We may seek reassurance from the board that executives’ and/or board members’ financial interests in a given transaction have not adversely affected their ability to place shareholders’ interests before their own.

Related-party transactions

Due to the evolution of the various regional economies and role of the state, many Asian companies conduct transactions with connected / related parties. These can be categorized as non-recurring transactions and recurring / continuing services agreements. Where shareholders are required to vote on such transactions BlackRock expects companies to follow the associated listing rules and principles of disclosure outlined in the relevant corporate governance code. BlackRock also believes that the independent directors should ratify substantial transactions and related parties should abstain from voting. Where the above information is not disclosed or action is not taken to protect the rights of independent shareholders, BlackRock will consider voting against such proposals. For non-recurring transactions between related parties, we would expect the recommendation to support it to come from the independent directors, and ideally, the terms have been assessed through an independent appraisal process. In addition, it is good practice that it be approved by a separate vote of the non-conflicted shareholders.

Strategy, purpose, and culture

Strategy, purpose, and culture are more nuanced than many aspects of governance. An understanding of these matters, the involvement of the board in their articulation as well as oversight in their implementation are key for long-term investors to assess the company’s ability to generate value over time. BlackRock thus seeks from companies clear and insightful explanations in this area, and for transparency on these matters to become the norm in the region.

BlackRock expects companies to articulate the strategic milestones against which shareholders should assess performance, specifically, public disclosure of financial targets to be shared with all shareholders, for instance long-term return on capital or alternative criteria of value-creation. We expect companies to provide information on how the board contributes to strategy, purpose, and culture and oversees management’s implementation of the agreed plans and policies.

In the absence of this information, and / or when we have concerns, we believe that engagement is preferable to voting to communicate expectations on these matters to the company. In our engagement, we will underscore the importance of a clear articulation of strategy, purpose, and culture by the board. These aspects should be well-understood both by management and staff as well as transparent to investors to be able to assess if management and the board are exercising appropriate stewardship of resources and, over time, the company is moving consistently in the direction stated.

Compensation and benefits

The key purpose of compensation is to attract, retain, and reward competent directors, executives, and other staff who are fundamental to the long-term sustainable growth of shareholder value, with reward for executives contingent on controllable outcomes that add value. BlackRock expects a company’s board of directors to put in place a compensation structure that incentivizes and rewards executives appropriately and is linked with performance that aligns with shareholder interests, particularly the generation of sustainable long-term value. We would expect the compensation committee to carefully consider the specific circumstances of the company and the key individuals the board is trying to incentivize. We encourage companies to ensure that their compensation plans incorporate appropriate and rigorous performance metrics consistent with corporate strategy and market practice. We use third-party research, in addition to our own analysis, to evaluate existing and proposed compensation structures. We hold members of the compensation committee or equivalent board members accountable for poor compensation practices or structures.

Whilst the level of fixed compensation is not considered to be particularly controversial in the majority of Asian companies, administration and disclosure of the structure of equity-based incentive schemes can be an issue.
BlackRock believes that there should be a clear link between variable pay and company performance that drives value creation. We are not supportive of one-off or special bonuses unrelated to company or individual performance. Where discretion has been used by the compensation committee, we expect disclosure relating to how and why the discretion was used, and further, how the adjusted outcome is aligned with the interests of shareholders. We acknowledge that the use of peer group evaluation by compensation committees can help ensure competitive pay; however, we are concerned when the rationale for increases in total compensation at a company is solely based on peer benchmarking rather than a rigorous measure of outperformance.

We support incentive plans that foster the sustainable achievement of results consistent with the company’s long-term strategic initiatives. The vesting timeframes associated with incentive plans should facilitate a focus on long-term value creation. We believe consideration should be given to building claw back provisions into incentive plans such that executives would be required to forgo rewards when they are not justified by actual performance and/or when compensation was based on faulty financial reporting or deceptive business practices. We also favor recoupment from any senior executive whose behavior caused material financial harm to shareholders, material reputational risk to the company, or resulted in a criminal investigation, even if such actions did not ultimately result in a material restatement of past results. Compensation committees should guard against contractual arrangements that would entitle executives to material compensation for early termination of their contract. Finally, pension contributions and other deferred compensation arrangements should be reasonable in light of market practice.

BlackRock may consider voting against an options plan if it may lead to over 10% cumulative dilution over ten years inclusive of existing plans, or if a plan is not transparent in demonstrating the distribution of option awards between senior executives and other staff.

BlackRock believes that the executives should not sit on the compensation committee. The compensation committee is responsible for ensuring the transparency of compensation structures; in particular, disclosure and structure of performance based pay. Where BlackRock believes the compensation committee has failed in its role, we will consider voting against the re-election of members of the committee. If there is not a compensation committee, we will determine the most relevant directors and consider voting against their re-election.

Environmental and social issues

We believe that well-managed companies will deal effectively with material ESG factors relevant to their businesses. As stated throughout this document, governance is the core structure by which boards can oversee the creation of sustainable long-term value—appropriate risk oversight of environmental and social (“E&S”) considerations stems from this construct.

Robust disclosure is essential for investors to effectively gauge companies’ business practices and strategic planning related to E&S risks and opportunities. When a company’s reporting is inadequate, investors, including BlackRock, will increasingly conclude that companies are not adequately managing risk. Given the increased understanding of material sustainability risks and opportunities, and the need for better information to assess them, BlackRock will advocate for continued improvement in companies’ reporting and will hold management and/or directors accountable where disclosures or the business practices underlying them are inadequate.

BlackRock views the recommendations of the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD) and the standards put forward by the Sustainability Accounting Standards Board (SASB) as appropriate and complementary frameworks for companies to adopt for the disclosure of financially material sustainability information. While the TCFD framework was crafted with the aim of climate-related risk disclosure, the four pillars of the TCFD – Governance, Strategy, Risk Management, and Metrics and Targets – are a useful way for companies to disclose how they identify, assess, manage, and oversee a variety of sustainability-related risks and opportunities. SASB’s industry-specific guidance (as identified in its materiality map) is beneficial in helping companies identify key performance indicators (KPIs) across various dimensions of sustainability that are considered to be financially material and decision-useful within their industry.
Accordingly, we ask companies to:

- Disclose the identification, assessment, management, and oversight of sustainability-related risks in accordance with the four pillars of TCFD; and

- Publish SASB-aligned reporting with industry-specific, material metrics and rigorous targets\(^1\).

Companies may also adopt or refer to guidance on sustainable and responsible business conduct issued by supranational organizations such as the United Nations or the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. Further, industry specific initiatives on managing specific operational risks may be useful. Companies should disclose any global standards adopted, the industry initiatives in which they participate, any peer group benchmarking undertaken, and any assurance processes to help investors understand their approach to sustainable and responsible business practices.

Climate risk

BlackRock believes that climate change has become a defining factor in companies’ long-term prospects. We expect every company to help their investors understand how the company may be impacted by climate-related risk and opportunities, and how they are considered within strategy. Specifically, we expect companies to articulate how they are aligned to a scenario in which global warming is limited to well below 2\(^\circ\)C and is consistent with a global aspiration to reach Net Zero GHG emissions by 2050. The global aspiration is reflective of aggregated efforts; companies in developed and emerging markets are not equally equipped to transition their business and reduce emissions at the same rate—those in developed markets with the largest market capitalization are better positioned to adapt their business models at an accelerated pace. Government policy and regional targets may be reflective of these realities.

The public and private sectors have roles to play in aligning greenhouse gas reduction efforts with targets based on science, where available, to curb the worst effects of climate change and reach the global goal of carbon neutrality by the mid-century. Companies have an opportunity to utilize and contribute to the development of current and future low-carbon transition technologies, which are an important consideration for the rate at which emissions can be reduced. We expect companies to disclose how they are considering these challenges, alongside opportunities for innovation, within their strategy and emissions reduction efforts.

Key Stakeholder interests

Given our expectation that companies operate in long-term shareholders’ interests to create sustainable value and fulfill their purpose, BlackRock believes that companies should take due account of their key stakeholders’ interests. It is for each company to determine its key stakeholders based on what is material to its business, but they are likely to include employees, business partners (such as suppliers and distributors), clients and consumers, government and regulators, and the communities in which they operate, as well as investors.

Having regard to the interests of key stakeholders recognizes the collective nature of long-term value creation, and the extent to which each company’s prospects for growth are tied to its ability to foster strong sustainable relationships with those stakeholders. Companies should articulate how they address adverse impacts that could arise from their business practices and affect critical business relationships with their stakeholders. We expect companies to implement, to the extent appropriate, monitoring processes (often referred to as due diligence) to identify and mitigate potential adverse impacts, and grievance mechanisms to remediate any actual adverse impacts. The maintenance of trust within these relationships is often equated with a company’s social license to operate.

To ensure transparency and accountability, companies should report on how they have identified their key stakeholders and considered their interests in business decision-making, demonstrating the applicable governance, strategy, risk management, and metrics and targets. This approach should be overseen by the board, whose job it is to ensure that the approach taken is informed by and aligns with the company’s purpose.

\(^1\) See our commentary on our approach to engagement on TCFD and SASB aligned reporting for greater detail of our expectations.
In this context, we seek to understand a company’s approach and commitment to fostering a diverse workforce and inclusive workplace culture, which contributes to business continuity, innovation, and long-term value creation. As an important component of strategy, we expect boards to oversee human capital management. Appropriate disclosures should be provided to inform investors’ understanding of how companies are seeking to establish robust human capital management practices, including their actions and targets around diversity, equity and inclusion. When a company’s reporting is inadequate, we will increasingly conclude that companies are not adequately managing such issues and may hold management and / or directors accountable.

Shareholder proposals

In most markets in which BlackRock invests on behalf of clients, shareholders have the right to submit proposals to be voted on by shareholders at a company’s annual or extraordinary meeting, as long as eligibility and procedural requirements are met. The matters that we see put forward by shareholders address a wide range of topics, including governance reforms, capital management, and improvements in the management or disclosure of environmental and social risks.

When assessing shareholder proposals, we evaluate each proposal on its merit, with a singular focus on its implications for long-term value creation. We consider the business and economic relevance of the issue raised, as well as its materiality and the urgency with which we believe it should be addressed. We take into consideration the legal effect of the proposal, as shareholder proposals may be advisory or legally binding depending on the jurisdiction. We would not support proposals that we believe would result in over-reaching into the basic business decisions of the issuer.

Where a proposal is focused on an issue that we agree needs to be addressed and the intended outcome is consistent with long-term value creation, we will look to the board and management to demonstrate that the company has met the intent of the request made in the shareholder proposal. Where our analysis and / or engagement indicate a need for improvement in the company’s approach to the issue, we will support shareholder proposals that are reasonable and not unduly constraining on management. Alternatively, or in addition, we may vote against the re-election of one or more directors if, in our assessment, the board has not responded sufficiently or with an appropriate sense of urgency.

General corporate governance matters

BlackRock believes that shareholders have a right to material and timely information on the financial performance and viability of the companies in which they invest. In addition, companies should publish information on the governance structures in place and the rights of shareholders to influence these. The reporting and disclosure provided by companies helps shareholders assess whether their economic interests have been protected and the quality of the board’s oversight of management. BlackRock believes shareholders should have the right to vote on key corporate governance matters, including on changes to governance mechanisms, to submit proposals to the shareholders’ meeting, and to call special meetings of shareholders.

Amendments to articles of association

These proposals vary from routine changes to reflect regulatory change to significant changes that substantially alter the governance of the company. We will review these proposals on a case by case basis and support those proposals that we believe are in the best interests of shareholders.

Anti-takeover devices

BlackRock believes that transactions or practices that are intended to impede a potential takeover can be limiting to shareholders. BlackRock will generally not support proposals that introduce or renew anti-takeover devices.

Bundled proposals

We believe that shareholders should have the opportunity to review substantial issues individually without having to accept bundled proposals. Where several measures are grouped together, BlackRock may reject the overall proposal if it includes those that contradict or impede the rights and economic interests of shareholders.
India

Regulatory environment

The framework for India’s corporate governance practices is contained in The Companies Act, 2013 and the Companies (Amendment) Act 2017 (Companies Act), as well as the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Listing Obligations and Disclosure Requirements) Regulation 2015 and the subsequent SEBI LODR (Amendment) Regulations 2018 (LODR).

Boards and directors

Listed Indian companies have a single tiered board structure. Clause 49 requires a board to comprise not less than 50% non-executive directors. Where the chairman of the board is a non-independent director, at least one third of the board should comprise independent directors; where the chairman is an executive; at least 50% of the board should comprise independent directors.

BlackRock expects proxy statements to make clear disclosure regarding the independence of directors.

Where the structure of the board and the key board committees, without explanation, does not comply with the LODR, BlackRock will consider voting against the election of all non-independent non-executive directors.

Compensation and benefits

Non-executive directors

Under the Companies Act non-executive directors can be paid attendance fees and commission, where the maximum payable is expressed as a percentage of net profits. When a company does not make a profit shareholder approval must be obtained to pay non-executives any commission.

Indian companies often seek shareholder approval to pay commission, expressed as an amount not exceeding a percentage of the company’s net profit, to non-executive directors. Such authority is valid for a period of five years. BlackRock will normally support such proposals unless compensation issues have arisen in the past.

Executive directors

The Companies Act provides limits on the amount of remuneration paid to CEO’s and executive directors. Further, the Companies Act does not permit companies to pay executive directors when a company has no profits or the profits are inadequate unless consent from shareholders is received. Consent is also required if the amount paid to executives exceeds the limit set by the Companies Act.

When assessing proposals that require shareholder consent to pay executive directors above the Companies Act limit, or when a company has reported a loss, BlackRock will take into account the factors that have contributed to the performance of the company and the quantum of remuneration. BlackRock expects all listed companies to disclose the board’s remuneration policy for directors and key managerial personnel as stipulated under The Companies (Amendment) Act, 2017.

Appointment of CEO and approval of remuneration package

A routine proposal for Indian annual general meetings is the appointment of executive directors for a period of up to five years and approval of their remuneration packages. Unless BlackRock has concerns regarding the past performance of the executive directors and / or the remuneration packages appear, without explanation, to be excessive such proposals are generally supported. However, BlackRock does expect to see minimum disclosure of the following:

2 Independence is defined under the Companies Act, 2013 section (47). This definition is consistent with the definition used by BlackRock on page 3.
• All elements of the remuneration package of individual directors such as salary, bonuses, stock options, and pensions
• Details of fixed component and performance linked incentives along with performance criteria
• Details of service contracts, notice period, and any severance fees
• Stock option details including details on any discounts given and the exercise period of the options

BlackRock will consider voting against an executive director’s remuneration package if the executive director is a member of the remuneration committee.

Employee stock option plans

In accordance with the requirements of the SEBI, shareholder approval is required if a company seeks to issue options to employees under a stock option plan. When considering such proposals, BlackRock expects to see as minimum disclosure the following:

• Number of securities to be issued
• Recipients, including any members of the remuneration committee
• Performance measures
• Performance period
• Vesting conditions

BlackRock will consider voting against the introduction or renewal of equity based incentive plans if:

• The above information has not been disclosed
• Members of the remuneration committee are recipients of equity from the plans they administer
• The plan allows the administrators to price the grants at its discretion at the time of issuance, potentially at a significant discount to market price
• The plan may lead to over 10% cumulative dilution over ten years inclusive of existing plans, and / or if a plan is not transparent in demonstrating the distribution of option awards between senior executives and other staff

Capital structure

BlackRock believes the board is in the best position to determine the appropriate approach to capital management. When requesting shareholder approval of capital management related proposals, we take into account, inter alia, the level of disclosure and the potential dilution to existing shareholders.

Share issuances

When shareholder approval is requested for a general issuance of shares, BlackRock expects to see a cogent explanation for the proposed issue.

Debt issuance / Authority to increase borrowing limits / Pledging of assets for debt

When companies seek shareholder approval to issue debt, increase borrowing powers and / or pledge assets for debt, we expect the following information to be disclosed in the explanatory note:

• Detailed features of the debt instrument, including conversion rights
• Existing debt levels
• A clear rationale for the requested increase in debt
• The intended use of the funds and how this aligns with strategy

Where this information has not been disclosed, BlackRock will consider voting against such proposals.

Indonesia

Regulatory environment

The framework for Indonesia’s corporate governance is contained in the Indonesian Company Law (Company Law), Capital Markets Law, Bapepam Rule Book issued by the Capital Market Supervisory Agency (Bapepam), the Listing Rules of the Indonesian Stock Exchange (Listing Rules), and the Indonesian Code for Good Corporate Governance (Code). Whilst the ISX Listing Rules related to corporate governance are mandatory, compliance to the Code is voluntary. BlackRock expects Indonesian companies to comply with the Code, or alternatively provide a cogent explanation for non-compliance.

Boards and directors

Indonesian companies generally have a two-tiered board system comprising a board of directors and a board of commissioners. A commissioner cannot serve concurrently as a director, manager, or employee of the company.

The role of the board of commissioners is to supervise the board of directors, ensure the company fulfills all its legal obligations, and protects the interests of shareholders. The ISX Listing Rules requires 30% of the board commissioners to be independent. It also requires at least one unaffiliated director on the board of directors.

Where the structure of the company’s board of directors and / or board of commissioners does not meet the requirements of the Listing Rules, BlackRock will consider voting against the re-election of non-independent directors and / or commissioners.

Disclosure remains a concern in Indonesia with names and biographies of director nominees often not disclosed in advance of the meeting. BlackRock expects companies to disclose full details of directors and commissioners and identify directors and commissioners who are independent. Where companies have not disclosed information on directors and commissioners, BlackRock will consider voting against their election / re-election.

It is also common for director elections to be voted on as a bundled proposal. Where the directors and commissioners are elected by slate, BlackRock will consider voting against the entire slate if less than 30% of commissioners are independent.

Director compensation

Indonesian companies routinely seek shareholder approval to fix the fees of directors and commissioners. When assessing such proposals, BlackRock expects full disclosure of salaries and any limit which may apply. Where this information has not been provided, BlackRock will consider voting against such proposals.

Malaysia

Regulatory environment

The framework for Malaysia’s corporate governance is contained in the Companies Act 2016, the Capital Market Services Act, the Bursa Malaysia Securities Berhad Listing Requirements (Listing Requirements), and the 2017 Malaysian Code on Corporate Governance (Code). The Code follows an apply-or-explain-an-alternative approach, dubbed by the Securities Commission Malaysia as “Comprehend, Apply, and Report (CARE).”
Boards and directors

Listed Malaysian companies have a single tiered board structure. The Code requires all listed companies to have at least half of the board comprised of independent directors, while large companies must have a majority independent board.

Where the structure of the board including the key board committees does not meet the requirements set forth under the Code and a cogent explanation has not been provided, BlackRock will consider voting against the election / re-election of non-independent directors.

Independent directors

The Code requires that boards introduce a policy which limits the cumulative term of independent directors to nine years, beyond which the director may serve as a non-independent (non-executive) director. Should the board intend to retain the independent director beyond nine years, it must provide justification and seek annual shareholders’ approval until the twelfth year. Beyond the twelfth year, the board must seek annual shareholders’ approval under a two-tier voting process.

BlackRock will consider voting against the re-election of a long-tenured independent director beyond his / her nine-year term unless a cogent explanation is provided by the board, justifying the retention of the director.

Capital structure

BlackRock believes the board is in the best position to determine the appropriate approach to capital management. When requesting shareholder approval of capital management related proposals, we take into account, inter alia, the level of disclosure and the potential dilution to existing shareholders.

Related-party transactions

Under the Listing Requirements, companies may seek a general mandate from shareholders to enter into related-party transactions that could be necessary for the company’s day-to-day operations. While BlackRock will assess related-party transactions on a case-by-case basis, we expect such transactions to be carried out on normal commercial terms and conditions. In respect of proposals relating to related-party transactions we expect, as a minimum, disclosure of the following:

- Full discourse of the nature of the transaction, including details of the related parties involved
- The pricing terms
- Any annual limits for an on-going mandate

Philippines

Regulatory environment

The framework for Philippine’s corporate governance is contained in the Corporation Code of the Philippines (Corporation Code), the Securities Regulation Code (SRC), the Philippines Stock Exchange Listing Rules and the 2017 Philippine Code of Corporate Governance (Code), a combination of mandatory and voluntary code issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), the Corporate Governance Guidelines for Companies Listed on the Philippine Stock Exchange (CG Guidelines), and the Philippines Guidelines on Nomination and Election of Independent Directors (Guidelines). The Code follows a comply-or-explain approach, and the rules of the Code are required to be embodied in a manual that can be used

---

1 Large companies are defined by the SC as (i) companies on the FTSE Bursa Malaysia Top 100 index; or (ii) companies with market capitalization of RM 2 billion and above.
as a reference by members of the board and management. Companies are required to submit their manual to the SEC; the manual shall be made available for inspection by any shareholders.

Boards and directors

Listed Philippine companies have a single-tiered board structure. The revised Code requires public company boards to have the greater of at least three independent directors or at least one-third independent directors on the board. The Code also recommends the separation of the chairman and CEO roles.

Where the structure of a board does not meet the requirements of the Code, and a cogent explanation has not been provided, BlackRock will consider voting against the re-election of non-independent directors.

Ratification of previous corporate acts

This is a routine request by Philippine companies. Shareholders are asked to ratify the acts and resolutions referred to in the proposal that have been done in the ordinary course of the business of the company. In general, BlackRock is supportive of such proposals, unless there is a specific reason to vote against.

Singapore

Regulatory environment

The framework for Singapore’s corporate governance is contained in the Code of Corporate Governance (Code), the Companies Act (Act), the Listing Manual of the Singapore Stock Exchange (SGX), and the Code on Takeovers and Mergers. The MAS and the SGX jointly oversee the Code of Corporate Governance, which follows a comply-or-explain approach.

In Singapore, disclosure of relevant information is robust relative to other markets in the region and there are few impediments to proxy voting.

Boards and directors

Listed Singaporean companies have a single-tiered board structure. Under the Listing Manual, at least one-third of directors should be independent. The provisions of the Code amended in 2018 requires non-executive directors to make up a majority of the board. Where the chairman is not independent, independent directors are to make up a majority of the board. Acknowledging that the requirements of the amended Code will not be fully phased in until 2022, BlackRock will consider voting against the election / re-election of all non-independent directors should the structure of the board, including the key board committees, not meet the requirements of the Code applicable at the time of the shareholder meeting, absent a cogent explanation.

Capital structure

BlackRock believes the board is in the best position to determine the appropriate approach to capital management. When requesting shareholder approval of capital management related proposals, we take into account, inter alia, the level of disclosure and the potential dilution to existing shareholders.

4 Independence is defined under the Philippine Code of Corporate Governance, Article 1 (e). This definition is consistent with the definition used by BlackRock on page 3.

5 Independence is defined under the Singapore Code of Corporate Governance, Principle 2.1. This definition is consistent with the definition used by BlackRock on page 3.
Share issuances

Under the SGX Listing Manual, shareholder approval is required for the board to issue shares and convertible securities. The SGX Listing Manual provides limits with respect to issuances as follows:

- The aggregate number of shares to be issued other than by way of renounceable rights issues does not exceed 50% of the issued shares in the capital of the company
- Of the 50% limit, the number of shares to be issued, other than on a pro rata basis to shareholders, does not exceed 20% of the issued shares in the capital of the company

For proposals relating to issuances without pre-emptive rights, BlackRock expects to see as a minimum disclosure of the following:

- Recipients of the proposed equity issue
- Details of any discounts to be offered and the rationale behind any proposed discount
- The basis of determining the issue price
- How the funds raised will be used
- Impact, if any, on change of control
- Conversion rates on equity (if applicable)

Unless a cogent explanation is provided, BlackRock will consider voting against proposals where the aggregate number of shares and / or convertible securities issued by way of a renounceable rights issue to shareholders exceeds 50% of the company’s outstanding shares.

BlackRock will also consider voting against proposals relating to issuances involving pre-emptive rights where the above disclosures have not been made and / or the aggregate number of shares and / or convertible securities issued without pre-emptive rights exceeds 10% of the company’s outstanding shares. Further, BlackRock will consider voting against such proposals where, without explanation, the issuance is at a discount exceeding 10%.

Compensation and benefits

Best practice encourages companies to implement incentive schemes with robust performance criteria and vesting periods, minimal dilution, and effective and independent administration.

The Listing Manual requires shareholder approval of share option schemes and share schemes. When assessing stock option and share plans BlackRock expects to see, at a minimum, disclosure of the following:

- Proposed participants in the scheme
- The maximum number of shares or options that can be issued under the scheme. A cogent explanation where the maximum number of shares or options exceeds 5% of issued capital for a mature company and 10% for an early phase/development company
- Any material conditions relating to the vesting of the options or shares
- Any discounts to the issue price and rationale for such discounts
- The scheme should not allow for re-pricing of options

Where, without explanation, the above disclosures have not been made or BlackRock considers other features of the scheme are not in the best interests of shareholders, we will consider voting against such schemes.
Where a company has an option or share scheme, shareholder approval is required for participation of controlling shareholders and their associates. Further, any grant of options to a director or employee of the issuer’s parent company and its subsidiaries that, together with options already granted to the person under the scheme, represents 5% or more of the total number of options available to such directors and employees, must be approved by independent shareholders. A separate resolution must be passed for each such person and to approve the aggregate number of options to be made available for grant to all directors and employees of the parent company and its subsidiaries.

When assessing equity grants to directors or employees, BlackRock expects full disclosure of the key features of the scheme under which the options or shares are to be issued. Where this information has not been disclosed, BlackRock will consider voting against such proposals.

Related-party transactions

The Listing Manual requires shareholder approval of related-party transactions. Singaporean companies can seek shareholder approval for a single related-party transaction or a general mandate for recurrent transactions of a revenue or trading nature or those necessary for the company’s day-to-day operations such as the purchase of supplies and materials, but not in respect of the purchase or sale of assets, undertakings or businesses. Where a general mandate is requested, such transactions must be carried out on normal commercial terms and conditions, and be reviewed by the audit committee.

While BlackRock will assess related-party transactions on a case-by-case basis, we expect such transactions to be carried out on normal commercial terms and conditions. In respect of related party transactions we expect, at a minimum, disclosure of the following:

- Full discourse of the nature of the transaction, including details of the related parties involved
- The pricing terms
- Any annual limits for an on-going mandate

South Korea

Regulatory environment

The framework for South Korea’s corporate governance is centered upon the Commercial Act, the Capital markets and Financial Investment Business Act, and the Stock Market Listing Regulations (Listing Regulations). Korea Corporate Governance Service (KCGS) has also released the Code of Best Practices for Corporate Governance (Code), which follows a comply-or-explain approach.

The Commercial Act imposes two sets of corporate governance standards on listed companies – one for those with assets larger than KRW 2 trillion (Large Companies) and those with assets between KRW 2 trillion and KRW 100 billion (Small Companies).

Boards and directors

Pursuant to the Commercial Act, listed companies are required to have a single-tiered board structure. While Large Companies are required to have an audit committee and outside director nomination committee, Small Companies are exempt from this requirement, and instead allowed to have a statutory auditor.

6 Mainboard Rule 904 (4) defines an “interested person” as (i) a director, CEO, or controlling shareholder of the issuer (ii) an associate of any such director, chief executive or controlling shareholder.
The Commercial Act requires outside directors\(^7\) to make up a majority of the board at Large Companies, and at least one-fourth for Small Companies.

The Code recommends for Large Companies the chairman not be a representative of management. Where this recommendation has not been met the Code states that it is desirable to elect a lead outside director to act as a representative for the other outside directors.

Where the structure of a board does not meet the requirements of the Code and a cogent explanation has not been provided, BlackRock will consider voting against the re-election of all non-outside directors.

Statutory auditor and audit committee

The position of statutory auditor is quite specific to South Korea. Small Companies are required under the Commercial Act to appoint one or more statutory auditors. The function of the statutory auditor is similar to that of the audit committee. Key features of the role are to supervise and ensure the directors discharge their duties as well as oversee the financial reporting of the company. Instead of a statutory auditor, a Small Company may choose to establish an audit committee.

Under the Commercial Act, an audit committee must be comprised of at least three directors, of which at least two must be outside directors. The audit committee must have at least one director with relevant financial background.

BlackRock expects all statutory auditors to be independent and at least one should have an auditing or relevant financial background. Where this is not the case, or we have concerns regarding past actions of statutory auditors, BlackRock will consider voting against their re-election.

Compensation and benefits

Outside directors

Korean law requires shareholders to approve a cap on total cash fees paid to directors. When directors seek to increase the fee cap, shareholder approval must be sought. BlackRock considers requests for an increase in the fee cap on a case-by-case basis. We expect the explanatory notes to the meeting to clearly explain why the increase is being sought.

Outside directors should not receive performance-based remuneration as to do so would more closely align their interests with those of management, whose performance and remuneration they are intended to monitor on behalf of shareholders.

Outside directors should not receive any form of service-contingent retirement benefit. Such remuneration merely rewards a non-executive director for long service and may inhibit a non-executive director from resigning from the board if an issue of conflict or any other issue that would impair a director’s independence arises. BlackRock will consider voting against proposals to grant performance-based remuneration or retirement benefits to outside directors.

Taiwan

Regulatory environment and policy direction

The framework for Taiwan’s corporate governance is centered upon The Company Act (the Act), the Securities and Exchange Act (the SEA), Taiwan Stock Exchange Corporation rules Governing Review of Securities Listings, and the Taipei Exchange Rules Governing the Review of Securities for Trading on the TPEX (Listing Rules).

The Corporate Governance Best Practice Principles for TWSE/TPEx Listed Companies (the Principles) published in 2002 first set out market aspirations on key governance issues such as protection of shareholder rights, corporate boards and their fiduciary duties, and transparency. Since 2013, the Financial Supervisory Commission (FSC) has stepped up its efforts on corporate governance reform by establishing the Center for Corporate Governance under the Taiwan Stock Exchange.

\(^7\) The definition of Outside Director as per the Korean Code of Best Practices for Corporate Governance, Section 4, is consistent with the definition used by BlackRock on page 4.
and publishing two Corporate Governance Roadmaps with specific governance improvement objectives for two periods covering 2014 to 2016 and 2018 to 2020, respectively. The roadmap proposed for 2018 to 2020 includes action plans to strengthen board functions, enhance transparency, and encourage participation of external shareholders in corporate governance.

Boards and directors

Corporate governance in Taiwan started with a two-tiered board structure comprising a board of directors and a board of supervisors. The role of supervisory board is to provide oversight of management and financial reporting. Regulators have since changed stance and decided to opt for a single-tiered board structure. Over the past decade, companies have been asked to adopt audit committees to replace supervisors with the FSC announcing a draft plan to have all listed companies to establish an audit committee by 2022. Since the SEA allows companies only to establish either an audit committee or a board of supervisors, Taiwan will in effect phase out the two-tiered system and transition to a one-tiered board structure by 2022.

Currently, all listed companies in Taiwan must have at least two independent directors who represent no less than one-fifth of board. As the audit committee must consist of no less than three members with all members being independent directors and at least one with auditing or financial background, all listed companies should have at least three independent directors by 2022.

Non-compete restriction

Article 209 of the Act states that "a director who does anything for himself or on behalf of another person that is within the scope of the company’s business, shall explain to the meeting of shareholders the essential contents of such an act and secure its approval." This means that shareholder approval is required to release directors from this restriction. Approval of such proposals allows company directors to serve on the boards of other companies and conduct activities which may be considered to compete with the business affairs of the company.

When assessing such proposals BlackRock expects, as a minimum, disclosure of the following:

- Name of the other companies that the director intends to serve as a director

Full details of the businesses in which these other companies operate

Where we believe that there is no potential conflict of interest if the director serves on the other identified boards, BlackRock will generally support such proposals. Where, however, the above information has not been disclosed or we are concerned that there is potential conflict, BlackRock may consider voting against such proposals.

Legal entity directors

The Act allows legal entities (including government agency and juristic person) to be elected as a director through a natural person as its proxy. The legal entity director may switch the designated natural person proxy without shareholder approval, effectively removing the right of shareholders to elect directors. BlackRock strongly opposes the practice of legal entity directors and urges companies to refrain from utilizing such a structure.

Thailand

Regulatory environment

The framework for Thailand’s corporate governance is centered upon the Public Limited Companies Act (PLCA), the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), the Stock Exchange of Thailand (SET), the SEC’s Corporate Governance Code 2017 (Code), and SET’s Principles of Good Corporate Governance (Principles). The Code takes an “apply or explain” approach, whereas the Principles follow a “comply or explain” approach.
Boards and directors

Thai companies have a single-tiered board structure. The SEC regulation requires that there be a minimum of three independent directors or at least one-third of the board (whichever is higher) be independent. The Principles take the independence of the chairman into consideration, requiring at least one-third of the board to be made up of independent directors in the case that the chairman is independent, but at least one-half of the board to be made up of independent directors in the case that (i) the chairman and the CEO are the same person; (ii) the chairman and the CEO are immediate family members; (iii) the chairman is part of the management team; or (iv) the chairman is not an independent director.

Where a board does not, without explanation, meet the independence requirements of the Principles, BlackRock will consider voting against the election / re-election of non-independent directors.
