How did the Fund perform last year?

- For the reporting period ended July 31, 2026, the Fund returned 10.30%.
- For the same period, the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index returned 2.71% and the Russell 1000 Index returned 18.94%.

What contributed to performance?

During the reporting period, equity markets registered solid gains, outperforming the more modest gains of fixed-income securities. Across the LifePath® vintages, information technology stocks in the U.S. large-capitalization space were the largest driver of returns. Semiconductors and semiconductor equipment stocks benefited from robust demand for artificial intelligence (“AI”), cloud computing, and data center infrastructure, with high-performance AI chipmakers among the standout performers. Technology hardware, storage, and peripherals companies also advanced, supported by resilient consumer demand, improving pricing trends, and growing enterprise and hyperscale storage needs driven by AI-related data growth. In healthcare, pharmaceutical and biotechnology stocks benefited from increased deal activity, as pharmaceutical companies sought to bolster pipelines through acquisitions of emerging biotechnology companies. Strong demand for GLP-1 therapies, continued innovation, and clinical trial successes also supported the sector. International developed stocks were also notable contributors across all vintages. As the Bank of Japan exited its accommodative interest rate policy, multiple rate hikes lifted borrowing margins and boosted profitability for banking stocks in the country’s financials sector. Emerging market equities also benefited later-dated vintages.

The bond allocation modestly contributed to the retirement and earlier-dated LifePath® vintages during the reporting period. Mortgage-backed security and U.S. Treasury bonds gained amid shifting expectations for Federal Reserve policy, and ongoing economic and geopolitical uncertainty.

What detracted from performance?

Given the strength of equity and bond markets during the reporting period, there were no material detractors to the performance of any of the LifePath® vintages.
