What contributed to performance?

Japanese small-cap stocks were the most meaningful contributors to the Fund's return during the reporting period, as continued growth in domestic consumption supported companies with greater exposure to the Japanese economy. Artificial intelligence ("AI"), power infrastructure, and data-center demand helped drive stocks in the industrials sector. This included electrical equipment and industrial machinery companies, which benefited from strong demand for semiconductor and AI-related manufacturing equipment and continued investment in factory automation. Financials stocks in the United Kingdom also gained as higher-for-longer interest rates boosted net interest income (the difference between the rates banks charge for loans and the rates they pay for deposits) for banks. Stocks in Israel contributed, despite periods of high conflict and direct regional strikes, as local markets demonstrated exceptional resilience. In particular, utilities stocks gained amid rapid expansions.

What detracted from performance?

There were no significant detractors from the Fund's performance during the reporting period.
