Commentary as of 12/31/20

- The fund posted returns of 9.17% (Institutional shares) and 9.09% (Investor A shares, without sales charge) for the fourth quarter of 2020.
- The largest contributors to performance were an underweight exposure to the consumer discretionary sector and no holdings in real estate and utilities. Conversely, overweight positions in the health care and consumer staples sectors detracted from returns, as did stock selection in industrials.
- At quarter-end, the fund had overweight positions in consumer staples, industrials, and health care. The fund had underweight holdings in the consumer discretionary, financials, and materials sectors.

Contributors	Detractors
The largest contributors to performance were an underweight exposure to consumer discretionary, and zero weightings in real estate and utilities. Elsewhere, an overweight exposure to the information technology services and beverages industries, and an underweight position in the internet and media industries added value. Lastly, stock selection in Japan helped returns.	Overweight positions in the health care and consumer staples sectors detracted from returns, as did stock selection in industrials. An overweight position in the pharmaceuticals and household products industries also weighed on relative returns, as did stock selection in the machinery industry. Other detractors included stock selection in U.K.-listed companies.

Further insight

Although COVID-19 vaccine approvals are undoubtedly good news, we do not expect a linear improvement in economic data, nor do we expect to see a return to the “old normal”. The impact of 2020 on economies, governments, and society will be felt for years to come and businesses will have to adapt. Given this outlook, we believe companies with strong fundamentals will continue to drive market returns.

Important Risks: The fund is actively managed and its characteristics will vary. Holdings shown should not be deemed as a recommendation to buy or sell securities. Stock and bond values fluctuate in price so the value of your investment can go down depending on market conditions. Investing in small-cap companies may entail greater risk than large-cap companies, due to shorter operating histories, less seasoned management or lower trading volumes. Investing in mid-cap companies may entail greater risk than large-cap companies, due to shorter operating histories, less seasoned management or lower trading volumes. The fund may use derivatives to hedge its investments or to seek to enhance returns. Derivatives entail risks relating to liquidity, leverage and credit that may reduce returns and increase volatility. International investing involves special risks including, but not limited to political risks, currency fluctuations, illiquidity and volatility. These risks may be heightened for investments in emerging markets. Investments in emerging markets may be considered speculative and are more likely to experience hyperinflation and currency devaluations, which adversely affect returns. In addition, many emerging securities markets have lower trading volumes and less liquidity. Performance may be attributable to unusually high IPO profits. There is no guarantee this level of performance will be repeated. IPO securities have no trading history and the price may be volatile.
